

Associate Professor Malcolm Tull BSc (Econ), PhD
Brief curriculum vitae

Malcolm Tull is a member of Murdoch Business School's Economics and Finance Section. He served as Deputy Head of the Business School from January 2002 to June 2004. Malcolm teaches units at both undergraduate and postgraduate level on the Australian economy, Asian economic development and the economics of globalisation. He has published widely in the field of maritime studies and is currently engaged in research on port privatisation and fisheries management.

Selected Publications

'Centralised Port Planning: An Evaluation of the British and New Zealand Experience' (With J. Reveley). In G. Boyce and R. Gorski (eds.), Resources and Infrastructures in the Maritime Economy, 1500-2000, (St John's Newfoundland, 2002).

'Port Privatisation in Asia' in H. Gerstenberger & U. Welke, (eds.), Seefahrt im Zeichen der Globalisierung, (Münster:Westf. Dampfboot, 2002).

'The Potential for Historical Studies of Fisheries In Australia and New Zealand', (With Tom Polacheck), in L.R. Fischer, P. Holm and D. Starkey (eds), Exploited Seas: New Directions for Marine Environmental History, Research in Maritime History, No. 21 (St. John's, 2001).

'Economic prospects for freshwater Crayfish (Yabby) in Western Australia', Review of Marketing and Agricultural Economics, vol. 64, No. 3, December 1996, pp. 325-335.

'The Development of the Australian Fishing Industry: A Preliminary Survey', International Journal of Maritime History, V, No.1 (June 1993), pp. 95-126.

Prospects for Australian seafood exports: a case study of the Taiwanese market, Asia Research Centre Policy Paper No. 13, Murdoch University, 1993.